Global Rescue Recommended by Outside Magazine

February 11, 2006

“Most travel insurance reimburses for emergency medical expenses. But you’re usually on your own when trying to line up help in the first place. The new, Boston-based GLOBAL RESCUE offers round-the-clock medical consultation, access to Johns Hopkins’ worldwide network of rescue personnel and English-speaking doctors, and, should you need it, transport back home aboard a Gulfstream G300 jet. From $329 a year; www.globalrescue.com”
